

Dear IDS Members,

Welcome to the 5th issue of our new IDS newsletter!

Since our last newsletter, the IDS and many of our members enjoyed each other's company and shared a lot of scientific news within the field of dermoscopy at the 28th EADV Congress, which was held in Madrid, Spain on October 9-13.

The IDS Board members who were present also held an informal meeting together with the Editorial board of our official scientific journal Dermatology Practical and Conceptual hosted by Editor Prof. Giuseppe Argenziano.

DERMATOLOGY PRACTICAL & CONCEPTUAL

Latest Issue · November 2019

Highlights from the Editor-in-Chief

The double open-access DPC journal is the IDS' official journal and we have recently introduced the tradition of having our Editor-in-Chief, Prof. Giuseppe Argenziano, provide our members with a brief and critical introduction to the latest issue, which was published in October 2019.

We are happy to highlight some very interesting papers appearing in our latest issue, which contains quite a nice number of review papers, research articles and beautiful letters concerning special cases observed by our editors and IDS members.

First, we have a beautiful article written by the Bologna group which is very passionate about hair disorders. They have compiled an excellent study on alopecia areata incognita and diffuse alopecia areata showing how dermoscopy can be helpful in their differentiation, since distinguishing them clinically can be difficult.

The second paper we would like to mention is an observational study on the dermoscopic and histopathological correlation of eccrine poroma. As you already know, eccrine poroma is a great simulator of many tumors, so by getting to know more about these tumors we will become more skilled in the diagnosis of these benign tumors.

The third paper is an amazing review paper by Sidharth Sonthalia et al. with an update on the expanding indications and future prospects of dermoscopy. The paper highlights the application of dermoscopy in the fields of general dermatology, inflammatory diseases, infectious diseases and more. So, we can proudly say that the dermoscope has truly become the dermatologist's stethoscope.

Finally, we would also like to recommend another review article called "Sun exposure: beyond the risks". It speaks of the positive effects of sun exposure on a variety of health conditions. Sun exposure has proven to be beneficial for lymphomas and other cancers (e.g. pancreatic, prostatic, colorectal and breast cancer), arterial hypertension and many more other diseases. The paper concludes that moderation in terms of sun exposure should be recommended instead of strict and total avoidance.

For more information, follow us on our social media pages (Facebook and Twitter) where you will be informed on a regular basis! Until the next issue, we hope you will enjoy our latest one!

Warm regards from the DPC team,
